It's been said that it's the number of pots you make, not how long you've been a potter that gives you the experience necessary to produce quality work. Though applicable to many things, "practice makes perfect" is an especially true mantra in clay. This session will focus on honing the basic skills that are essential to any ceramicist's tool box. Students will be exposed to various methods of common tasks – wedging, centering, throwing, forming, finishing and glazing will all be explored from several angles. With an emphasis on repetition and creative problem solving, students will come away with a more comprehensive understanding of the ceramic process. Tips, tricks, and shortcuts will be peppered in along the way..
